Senior year. This is it, time to bid a fond farewell to all the things that made Barnard a special place to us. Now that we are moving beyond these sheltering walls: are we ready?

"I THINK IT'S MY DESTINY ...

As they say, there's a whole wide world out there and now it is time for us to discover it. From orientation to graduation we have changed so much, through the education we have received, the friendships we have made and the experiences we have lived through. Are we ready? - yes, we are.

THAT I AM CHANGING."

- Suzanne Vega '81

Ollie's, Grandma's, Tom's, College Inn, Cafe Pertutti's, The West End, V & T's, Amsterdam Cafe, Coronet, Famiglia, Indian Cafe . . . what was your alternative to dining hall cuisine? As first-years, we didn't have much choice- it was either Hewitt, McIntosh or John Jay. Gradually we became more adventurous, exploring the different types of eating establishments in Morningside Heights. We made bagel runs at 2:30 in the morning, we had Chinese food delivered while we were studying for finals. We survived Rickie's, which featured a large, plastic cow in the window, and saw the passing of Moon Palace. And although Grandma's received a facelift, the menu still looked suspiciously similar to the ones in Tom's and College Inn. When the body craved dessert, it was off to Häagen Dazs, Sedutto's, Mrs. Fields or Cafe 112. When we cooked (mainly pasta it seemed) University Food Market, Sloan's, Mama Joy's, D'Agostino's and the vegetable stands on Broadway provided all we needed. One of the great things about coming to school in New York City was that even at 4:00 in the morning there was somewhere we could go to feed our stomachs.

And when we couldn't afford to eat out there was always McIntosh!

"NOW THAT IT'S ALL OVER

VHAT DID YOU REALLY DO TODAY THAT'S VORTH MENTIONING?"

Office of the President

To the Members of the Class of 1992:

With your entry, Barnard became a truly residential college, and you have participated in the life of the College as no class before you was able to do. Not only have you helped all of us to forge a closer community here, but you have laid the foundation for a lifelong network of friendships and for an enduring relationship with this institution.

These four years have been ones of curricular evolution at the College and political revolution in the world. I do not know how the world will look tomorrow or next year, but whatever occurs, I am sure that the knowledge and skills you have gained in your undergraduate years will stand you in good stead. Women like you will make a difference.

Even as your abilities, your spirit, and your commitment take you far, we hope that you will continue to feel a bond with the College. You have our confidence and our affection and we wish every one of you the best of luck and much happiness both personally and professionally.

With warmest wishes,

Sincerely,

Ellen V. Futter

Dear Class of 1992,

In 1983, as we initiated our Centennial Year-and-a-half, I said to you on the first day of Orientation:

You are the Class of '92, Complete with savvy and derring-do, Fleet of foot and high of brow--A class for here, a class for now!

Historian, actor, conservator, Chemist, linguist, troubador, Pre-med, pre-law, pre-don't-know, A poet or two, in embryo.

Stuck on science, hipped on dance, Drawn to painting, high on finance, Tennis pro or couch potato, Computer freak or into Plato.

Wide or narrow, short or high, Busy bee or butterfly, Messy, neat, or in-between, Living on pizza, or just caffeine!

You symbolize our Centennial Year: No two alike--that's very clear--But every single one of you Adds class indeed to '92!

What is there to add? You're already great, you'll do great things--your own things--and we shall welcome you back whenever and always.

Affectionately,

Barbara S. Schmitter

The Asian Community Awareness Program is a student volunteer organization dedicated to interaction and outreach in New York's Asian communities. Sponsored by the Asian Students' Union, the Chinese Students' Club and the Korean Students' Association, ACAP offers a variety of opportunities for students to get involved in the various Asian communities of New York. We have programs with the Chinese American community of Chinatown, the Korean community of Flushing and the Japanese community of Manhattan. We run everything from after school programs to voter registration drives.

CEDA Debate

President: Josh Marguiles Vice-President: Aelisa Kim Treasurer: Ben Rhau Liaison: Ben Appen

Tournament Coordinators: Jason Au-

erbach, Alisa Berger

CEDA debaters argue with evidence on both sides of a national resolution with changes semesterly. The topic for fall '91 was "Resolved that the United States colleges and universities have inappropriately altered educational practices to address issue of race or gender." The team travels widely, ranging from South Carolina to Texas, from Vermont to Salt Lake City. While still a young team, Barnard/Columbia CEDA Debate has demonstrated a rate of growth that is truly astounding. This growth is manifested not merely in organizational size and enthusiasm, but in ability. For the past two years, the team has doubled in the first semester the total CEDA points (tabulated by the national organization as an indicator for success) that it received the entire previous season.

"Even now, after almost a decade, I have the same feeling when I rise out of the subway and see the rectangle of trees and wrought iron gate of Barnard Hall widening above me. What must I do, I still think, what can I accomplish, who shall I become? It is the feeling Barnard first evoked in me and the power that it still has years later, the feeling that somehow the institution was a kind of brick and stone matriarch expecting that I do, think, accomplish, be. I tried to live up to those expectations and eventually they became my own."

ACADEMICS

FIRST DAY OF CLASSES, 10AM:

I just sat through my first class of the semester—Biology. Nothing is more thrilling than sitting in a required class at 9am Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays. Try as I might, I just can't seem to get as excited as Professor Ammirato does and the thought of spending 3 hours in lab with my hands inside an animal just turns my stomach.

I'd better go to the bookstore before it gets crowded. Uh-oh! Too late. I should come back later. Maybe I'd better check the prices of the book. What!! $97 bucks for a book I'm not even going to read! Well, hey, science textbooks are known to be excellent doorstops. I have to come back later since the other required books are still on order. What a surprise. I'm just going to go back to my room to keep on sleeping. It's way too early for me.

HOURS LATER STILL IN BED:

What time is it? Let's see. 1:30pm. I'm late for my 1:10 class. That's just great. But wait, I told my friend I was going to meet her at 2:00 for lunch. I'd better skip class. Hey, it's only the first class of the afternoon anyway, how much can the professor teach?

Tonight I'm going out with my friends to check out the college scene. No one is going to be studying today. At least I know that I definitely won't.

WEEKS LATER:

Why am I here? Life sucks!! My test in Biology is tomorrow and I just bought the book. There's no way I'm going to be able to memorize 4 chapters. Boy, I sure wish I read everything on time. I have no other choice, but to do an all-nighter.

O.K. Let's open the book. Oooh. Hear the cracking of the book. Nice pictures, but not enough. Damn! O.K. Keeton and Gould, teach me! Let's start with the definition. "Biology is the study of this very special category of energy..." This I can dig. What's this? They are asking me what ameobias, redwoods, and people have in common? Who cares!! Sigh! Why did I decide to take this course? Should I Pass/Fail? But I'd still have to read something to be able to pass.

TWO HOURS LATER:

I need coffee!! My eyes want to close so badly. It's only 11:30pm and I haven't even finished the first chapter. It's such a long chapter. Help me someone! Wait, I can do this. I just have to work my butt off.

SEVERAL HOURS LATER:

Yes! I finished reading all the chapters. I just needed a little bit of a push. I know I don't remember it all, but at least when I see the question I might recognize it. I'll sleep for three hours and take the test. I just know that for next time, I'll plan ahead, and read the text when I am supposed to. A lesson learned at college, but never applied.

MULTICULTURALISM

Barnard, like the city it resides in reflects a multicultural world. Within these gates many different ethnic backgrounds can be seen on the faces of the students as we mix and mingle and learn to live with one another. Learning to be aware of your own culture as well as learning to respect the cultures of the people around you is an objective that Barnard has catered to. Aside from college sponsored events promoting multicultural awareness, the college also supports various ethnic organizations on campus. From Alianza to Zamana, these groups provide social, political and cultural activities which they use to promote the uniqueness of their traditions and backgrounds as well as serve as a center to those of us who are part of an ethnic group.

Cultural awareness can come upon us while we aren't looking; almost seeping through our skins as we come into contact with culturally diverse groups of people and become familiar with their backgrounds and traditions. Because of the variety of ethnically oriented experiences available on campus we have been able to discover Ethiopian food at last year's Multicultural Foodfest, to learn that Oriental is a derogatory way of refering to East Asians, to protest with Accion Boricua against the holding of political prisoners in Puerto Rico, to appreciate hula as performed by the Hawaii Club, to raggae with the Carribbean Students Association, to enjoy a Chinese New Year's Celebration presented by the Chinese Students Club, and to listen to the tones of Pizmon, the Jewish singing group.

As the world becomes smaller through telephones, fax machines, TVs and airplanes, it becomes vitally important that we have an understanding and respect for the traditions and practices of different cultures. After being at Barnard for four years and being exposed to this diversity of cultures, my perceptions and awareness have become wider and I will carry this with me into our multicultural world.

BARNARD AND THE COMMUNITY

We all know the hardships that can be found in any large urban areas. For some people, Barnard provides the opportunity to give something back to the community, whether it takes the form of tutoring public school kids, donating blood, working in a soup kitchen, or raising money to fight the debilitating effects of poverty. Programs on campus such as Liberty, Students Helping Students, and Oxfam are among the many groups that provide Barnard Students a channel for their concern.

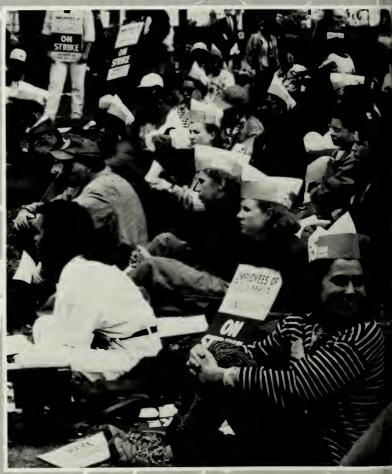

THE POLITICAL ARENA . . .

BARNARD FOR COLUMBIA CTUDENTS

DORM LIFE

So you're moving into a college dorm. You wrote that you were a night person, you don't mind smoking and you're not a neat freak-what could possibly go wrong? You're thrilled to find out how much you and your new soulmate have in common, two arms and two legs. Not that your looking but its hard to find faults with your new roommate with all of the fun and exciting orientation activities going on (read: free dinner at Dallas Bar-B-Q). The happy bliss of orientation subsides to the routine drudgery of everyday life (read. three meals a day in Hewitt). Your room becomes one of the earliest examples of multi-culturalism at Barnard; unfortunately it accomplishes this through the diverse eco-system of vermin that thrive in your long forgotten midnight snacks.

You begin to notice that your roommate, yes the one with the cherubic face and child-like giggle, is actually a closet sadist. Needless to say roommate relations grind to a halt. Your room becomes the front line in a brand new cold war. So you spend the rest of the year in an atmosphere of subversive warfare rather than the happy bantering and sister-like understanding of "A Different World". Housing lottery rolls around bringing a plethora of difficult choices: will people think you're a loser if you pick in by yourself, do you really want to live with you friends, what is more important to you-having a single or being able to fully extend your legs? So under great pressure you move in with your five closest friends. Of course, they were a lot easier to love when they weren't eating your food. Lack of a meal plan turns you into an expert moocher- you can now smell free food five miles downwind. There definitely were downfalls to living with yours friends-"You have no new messages" became an all too familiar term. But what can take place of a group of people who tell you its O.K. not to write the paper if it will make you unhappy or having truly important conversations with someone while you're brushing your teeth?

You dream of senior year . . .

That long awaited day finally arrives. This time it's different- you have so many dorms to chose from: Furnald, Centennial (oopsby now it's that new funny name that ends with Sulzberger), East Campus . . . You're unable to cope with this strange new pressure and in the fit of desperation you choose the one with the prettiest name, River. After all, it is conveniently located near Cosmo's and The West End. You're just a hop away from Riverside Park, now you can do all of that running that you've been meaning to do. HAH! During your last year in campus housing, you realize that there are certain ultimate truths about dorm life: the heat never goes on unless it's above 75 degrees outside, if you have too much work to do you can always find someone to talk to for an indefinite period of time, singles beat leg room any day and RAs are much more pleasant when they're offering free food than when they're chasing you around with some stupid form to be completed.

Rolm definitely was not built in a day. It's been almost 4 years and Telecommunications is still working the bugs out of the system! Have you gotten used to the phone going dead in the middle of a conversation or when the phone just doesn't work at all for days at a time? And why, if this system is so advanced, can't the call waiting feature make a noise or something? Who keeps such close watch on their phones that they catch that little red light anyway?

But as annoying as the system seems sometimes, we are going to miss it after we graduate. Rolm offers some really great features that we have become addicted to. After you have memorized all the buttons that you need to access these features you are on your way to conference calling, speed dialing, call waiting, message forwarding, transferring, camping, and of course, PhoneMail heaven. It's also really nice to know before you pick up the receiver whether you are getting a call from a friend on campus or a call from home asking why you haven't phoned in three weeks. If you haven't figured out how to use it yet, the conference calling is incredible. Having up to 8 friends on one line is a riot. No need to pay 970 party line prices!

COMMUTER LIFE

Incredible as it sounds, not everyone lives on campus! The majority of commuters fall into two categories: drivers and subway riders. Here is a typical morning situation . . .

"I'm running late again! And I have to make the 7:55 train if I want a chance at making my nine o'clock class - I hope there were no problems in the subway system today! . . . What - stuck again? I don't have time for this! I'm at Times Square and I have fifteen minutes to make it to class . . . If an express comes NOW, I might be able to catch up to a #1 or #9 between here and 96th Street . . . and here it comes . . . (five minutes later) Now I have ten minutes . . . If that local would show up, I'd make it with time to spare - Who would think that twenty blocks could be so insurmountable? ... Finally, here it is .. . Next stop 137th Street? But I'm late! It's funny how the train "right behind" the last one can take ten minutes to show up! Oh well, the class is an hour-and-a-half long - how much can I miss in ten minutes?"

So you think that you know all that there is to know about Barnard? Well, here's a quick matching quiz to test your knowledge:

1. Phyllis Ben

a. Everybody's favorite rhyming dean.

2. Gloria

b. Long time Barnard security guard who earned an article in the Times for her generosity.

3. Dean Schmitter c. Friendly face at

McIntosh that prefaces every sale with a "Hi Honey!"

Well, how did you do? Chances are that you scored only one of the only 100% in your college career in this test. There are certain people at Barnard who become as familiar to you as your own room. These people generally possess a quality that makes an impression on us, kindness and cheerfulness are examples. Although I'm fairly sure that it's not required on their job descriptions, these people do their best to brighten the sometimes dim day of a student.

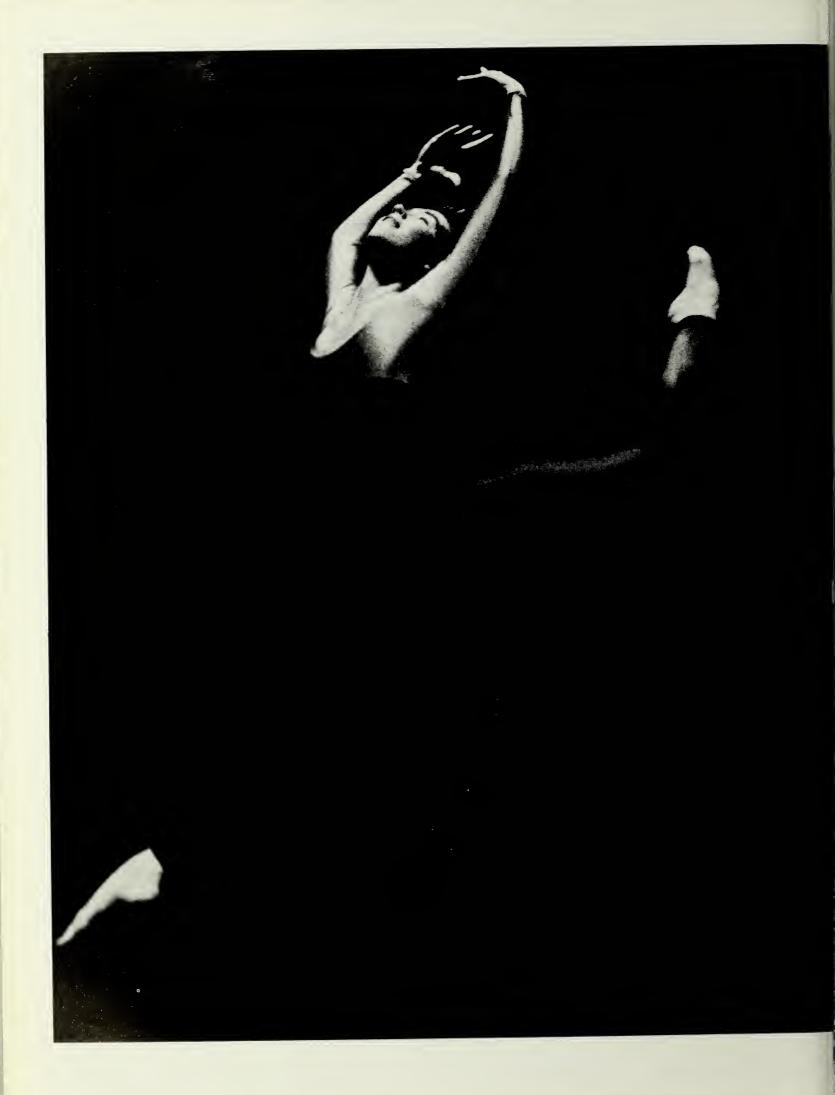

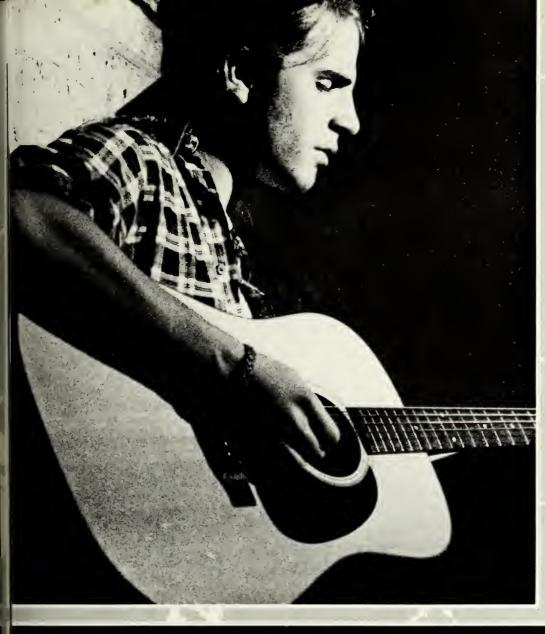

Being in New York is great, there is so much to do and see that it's easy for people to forget the rich variety of performance that we have right here on campus. Students showcase their talents in such forums as Postcrypt, McAc Coffeehouse Nights, theater productions, dance recitals and concerts. Not only are the audiences rewarded with superb entertainment, but also with excellent bargains. Compare a $5 admission to an on campus show with the exorbinant prices associated with most of New York entertainment. Aside from giving Columbia University students something to watch, student productions also provide the performers with invaluable experience.

New York: The Ups . . .

NEW YORK: One helluva town; if you can make it here, you can make it anywhere; the City, the Big Apple. Ask me about New York. I dare you. (There's that New York charm you've heard so much about.) I toss my head back, stretch my arms to the sky, and say in my best hippie accent: "New York is not just a location. It is, as Billy Joel suggests a STATE OF MIND!" I'm not talking about a mind content with Bingo nights either. What does it mean to wake up to a city that never sleeps? It may mean, to those from more peaceful regions—no sleep. But even they will realize that any place that can provide Boston Cream pie minutes from campus at three in the morning cannot be as bad as statistics imply.

Unfortunately, the statistics and the evening news frighten some away. Understandably, students from out of state may want to click their heels and be home. We do have a reputation for being loud, obnoxious, vulgar, rude, and callous. Who would not be defensive having insults hurled at them? And even though it may seem like we are actually trying to live up to the accusations, understand that the etiquette is just different in New York. It is not easy to adjust to a space about the size of a gum wrapper on the train during rush hour. Those growls and snarls are territorial. Please do not take them personally. As corny as it sounds, what makes it better is when, even briefly, someone flashes a smile at you, nods hello or maybe offers you the paper he has just read. Sometimes you will be engaged in some lively, friendly, conversations and during the holiday season, with enough spirit, you might even be able to coax someone into singing Christmas carols. Try it.

Even though I'm one of the natives, I am occasionally so captivated by the lights, the sounds, street bands and streaks of yellow cabs that I want to burst into "New York, New York," Frank Sinatra style. No one would think me clinically insane. "Only in New York," someone would mutter. Maybe they would toss coins at me. Take a train to any random stop and step out onto busy streets wrapped in ribbons of lights and a landscape inscribed by a postcard quality skyline. Just beyond these gates of Columbia University awaits a cultural, dynamic, diverse, exciting; educational and entertaining city open twenty four hours. You can never have a case of the "I'm-bored-there's-nothing-to-do's."

Eat authentic Italian pastries and sip cappucino in one of the charming cafes in Little Italy. (Don't forget "Ferrarra's", the landmark pastry snack shop and bakery on Grand Street.) Walk over to Broadway and sample a variety of trend setting stores, then enjoy the downtown area, making sure not to miss SoHo and Chinatown. Enjoy a network of narrow streets that hides intriguing antique shops, rare book stores, cafes, and galleries. In the summer you will find crews filming on location in this area. Another highlight, once sugested by my Journalism professor, is to sit in on Night Court on Centre Street.

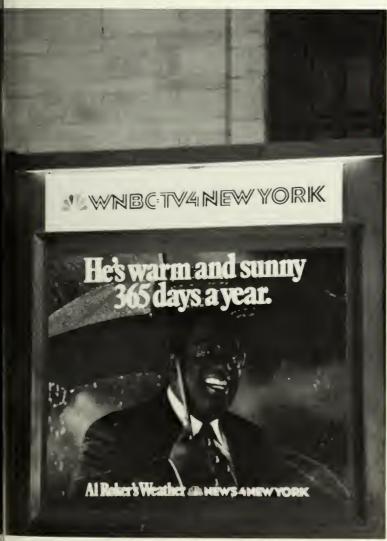

If you like shopping, there is Fifth Avenue, the home of FAO Shwartz, Tiffany's, Godiva, Saks, Lord and Taylor's, and countless exclusive shops that can also be found on Lexington, Madison, and Columbus avenues. New York also has Macy's and indoor malls: A & S Plaza, World Trade Center, and South Street Seaport's Pier 17. While in the midtown area, visit Rockefeller Center; especially during the winter for ice skating, St. Patrick's Cathedral and the Empire State Building for an unparalleled view of the City.

And The Downs . . .

Courtesy AP

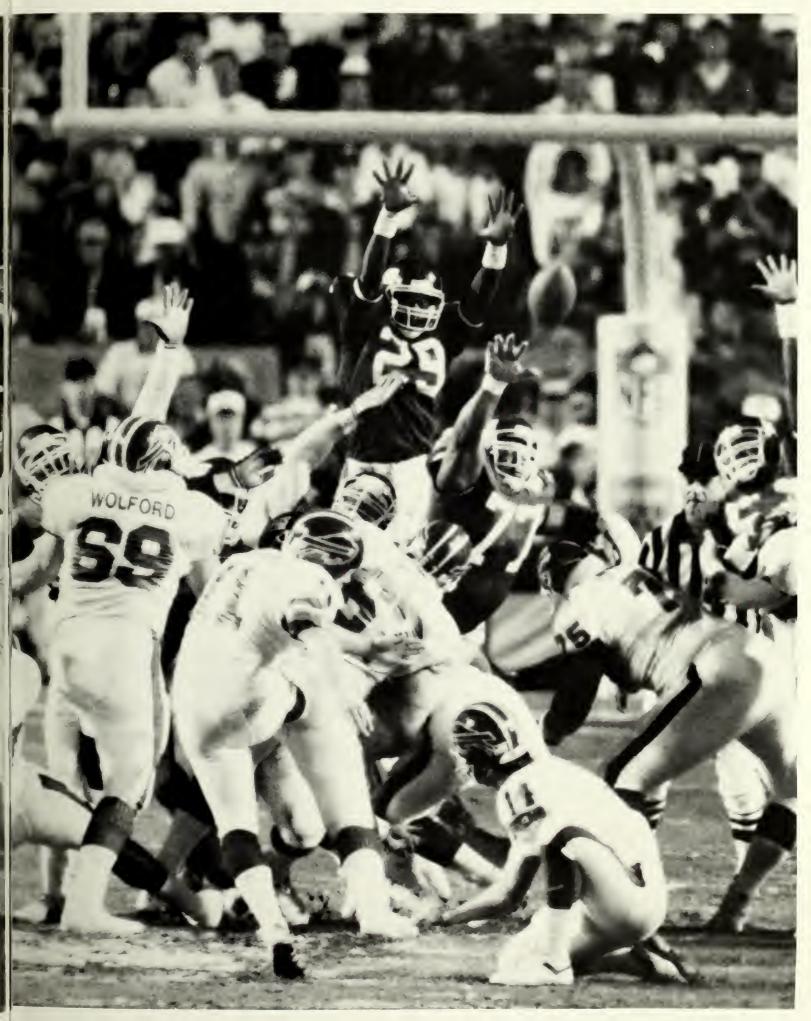

New York appeals to every aspect of a student. Our lives are not confined to the campus. We can dance at one of the numerous clubs, satisfy our humor at a comedy club, challenge the limit of our credit cards, appreciate the historic, the architectural, the literary, the artistic, the gourmet, or just relax.

There are also smaller neighborhoods: streets of brownstones where children still play on the stoops like your parents said they did. There is a deli on the corner that slices the leanest roast beef on the East Side and the Pizza place next to the Chemist's makes the best pizza in the tri-state area. Every morning, the perfect cup of coffee beckons from your favorite shop. New Yorkers are a little habitual in that we will walk a block out of the way to buy a pretzel (with or without mustard) from a familiar hot dog stand. the vendor will know that on Tuesdays you like your hot dog with sauerkraut. There is some security in knowing that even in a big place like New York, the details do not get lost.

So, New York means the big and the extraordinary. The best of dining, the Ballet, the Opera, Art, and Theater. It also means small informal poetry readings, street performers a la Elizabehan England, the libraries, revival houses, coffee houses on Bleecker Street, the little spot you consider your own personal discovery, your favorite people-watching perch, the place where you found the perfectly worn copy of A Room with a View, "your" place, "our" place, the place where you fell in love. This is the place. Cue Frank Sinatra.

SENIOR STRESS

They call it Senior Stress, but it really starts at the end of Junior Year. LSAT's, MCAT's and GRE's started taking over our lives only to have to take them over again Senior Year. You're not even free during summer break. As you're lying on the beach, relaxed to a near comatose state, suddenly visions of your classmates busily researching their thesis topics fill your head.

Then, the questions begin. Mom, the paper boy and the dentist all suddenly develop an interest in your future. "So you're a (place liberal arts major here). How interesting. What are you going to do with THAT??" You find yourself a victim of migraines, chronic fatigue syndrome and that annoying cold which never goes away. But worst of all, you thesis advisor never seems to understand why you don't have your outline finished in October for your thesis that's due in MAY! It's during the first semester of your senior year that you discover the truth about the library - they receive all of their funding from seniors who can't remember when their thesis books are due.

The above only deals with the overt pressure. From your first day back on campus career services launches a subversive war on you. Without any warning, as you are innocently checking your mail, "Mock Interviews," "Resume Workshops," and "Graduate School Fairs" assault you; a direct hit. Suddenly, as you're trying to squeeze into a navy blue suit in Macy's, you remember that you wanted to see the world after graduation, experience all that life has to offer. Instead you're preparing for your interview with the Mundane Brothers Law Firm. Career services strikes again.

Mortarboard 1992 © 1992 All Rights Reserved

Special Thanks to: Aster Laleman for his wit and for all of his help during times of great desparation, Jesse, our favorite late night McIntosh custodian/lifesaver/humorist, Karen Petrie, Chris Koutsovitis, Doris Miller, Betty Ouyang, and the rest of the gang at the College Activities Office, the McIntosh Night Managers, especially Kim and Usa, Jostens Printing and Publishing, Random House, Inc., Thorton Studios, Associated Press/Wide World Photos, the Student Government Association for all of their support, Andrew from The Columbian, Grace from The Engineer, Famous Famiglia Pizzeria for curing all of those late night hunger pangs, and all of our friends for dealing with our gruesome "We spent all night in McIntosh with no heat" stories.

We, the Mortarboard Staff of 1992, have spent the last 8 grueling months working on this yearbook, trying to make it as interesting as we possibly could. As the saying goes, "The difference between genius and stupidity is that genius has its limitations" and our limitations were ENDLESS! With such a small working staff, we are shocked that this book actually came out on time!! We thank all of you who helped us out during our little journey through hell. We tried our best and apologize for any mishaps and mistakes that might have happened in the process of publishing this book. Well, enough about us. We hope that this book gives each and everyone of you some deal of pleasure when you use it to glimpse back at what life here at Barnard was all about. Each wom[y]n in the Class of 1992 has gone through many individual changes, along with major local and world changes, yet took part in one of the most cohesive classes Barnard has seen in a long time.

In the beginning of the semester, when you filled out the senior quote pages, an incredibly high number of you wanted to dedicated this book to Dr. Seuss. We were thrilled because even before we received your responses, we had already decided to use quotes from Dr. Seuss' book, Oh, The Places You'll Go! The spirit and enthusiasm of the Class of 1992 is wonderfully stated in one of the most inspiring book we have come across in a long time. No one but Dr. Seuss would be able to accomplish this in a 44 page children's book, but, oh-a children's book it is not. (If you do not own this book yet, drop everything and get this book immediately!). You may notice that Dr. Seuss did not use gender neutral language in his book, but then again he didn't come to Barnard and never had the chance to be enlightened with the truth (even though we know that that's no excuse!).

We congratulate the 100th Graduating Class as we leave you with Dr. Seuss' words of wisdom:

So...

be your name Buxbaum or Bixby or Bray or Mordecai Ali Van Allen O'Shea, you're off to Great Places! Today is your day! You're mountain is waiting. So...get on your way!
